COLORADO AND KENTUCKY.

The conspiracy that seemed to have been formed to steal the Governorship of Colorado from the Hon. Alva Adams, who was duly elected in November, has broken down. Gov. J. H. Peabody, who made a fearless Governor, and who was on trial before the popular tribunal for approval of his strong course against the tyrannical labor unions of his State, was defeated. It makes no difference whether he should have been elected or defeated—the fact remains he was defeated at an election that gave the Republican national ticket an overwhelming majority. That was, on the face, proof that he was fairly defeated. It makes no great difference whether Republicans or Democrats govern Colorado, but it makes a great difference whether the honest result is ascertained and supported and the majority rules.

The action of the Republican Colorado Legislature in seating a Democrat as Governor in spite of the pressure to steal the office is creditable to the wisdom and honesty of that body. It leaves the State of Kentucky in a state of gloomy and forbidding solitude, as the only State where a governorship has been stolen over the protest of an Election Board constituted by the thieves and in spite of a majority of the votes cast for the ousted candidate. In view of what has happened in Kentucky since 1900 we do not believe that such a crime will be repeated in the lifetime of any person now living. The cost of it in corrupt politics, in demoralization of official consciences in breaking down the honorable traditions that govern public men in their political acts, has been severe.

Slowly but surely Kentucky is emerging from the confusion of the crime that shocked everybody. The time is rapidly coming when voters will understand that the political tie that binds men to party is always one that should be broken this side of crime and this side of approving bad men for office. In proportion as elections are uncertain in Kentucky, the State will have better government and more prosperity. In proportion as voters can defeat unworthy candidates and hold parties responsible for mismanagement, parties will be more careful to put up good men for office and hold them to rigid accountability.

The corner stone of this, however, is free and fair elections and the triumph of the winner, even though his plurality be but a single vote. Colorado has given Kentucky a cold lesson in common honesty. The Republicans of Colorado could have stolen the governorship from a Democrat, but refused to do it. Democrats in Kentucky could steal the governorship from a Republican—and did it.

Honesty is the best policy, in politics as in business. Let every Kentuckian, proud of his State and hopeful of the future, determine to do what he can to give the maxim force in elections.—Louisville Herald.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Republicans of Kentucky:

Colonels, Office-seekers and Gentlemen:—You know that our State has a reputation, good or bad, depending entirely on the standpoint from which it is viewed. More is expected from us than any other people in the world, for good or bad, one or the other, or both. When we go away from home our personal appearance attracts more attention than any other people. Now I propose that we redeem the State. My plan is this: We are all going to the inauguration on March 4th—the Colonels, the Office-seekers and the Gentlemen. Let us all be Colonels for that day, and join in the parade, attired in black frock coat, black slouch hat, each Colonel carrying a big stick, cut from a Kentucky forest. "A Big Stick."

If this proposition meets with favor, we can arrange with the Kentucky Colonels, Office-seekers and Gentlemen, that are now in Washington, to secure Kentucky headquarters.

What say you?
Very truly,
R. R. PERRY.
Winchester, Ky.
